

Navesink River Rowing

Traffic Patterns

Sticking to known traffic patterns helps ensure the safety of all rowers - and also makes rowing on the Navesink more enjoyable. Just imagine how stressful it would be if you never knew where you might encounter other rowers or from which direction they might come.

IN GENERAL, FOLLOW THIS PATTERN. WATCH FOR OTHER WATERCRAFT ON THE RIVER.

- Row east (towards the Oceanic Bridge in Rumson) on the south (Fair Haven) side of the river.
- Cross the river perpendicular to the shoreline.
- Row west (back toward Red Bank) on the north (Middletown) side.
- As you return to the area across from the Red Bank boat mooring field, slow down before the end of the rock wall and be on the lookout for rowers taking lessons.
- Do not return to the site along the same corridor (between boat mooring field and Red Bank shore) that rowers take when they leave the site.
- AND PLEASE-- Do not come into the rowing site area at full speed.
